Answer

12-02-03 Does your university as an institution have a policy, process, or practice regarding waste disposal - covering hazardous materials?

Yes (implicitly and academically confirmed): The university has "ethical and environmental policies related to waste management." This is reinforced by the existence of specialized academic programs such as the Master's in "Protection of Ecosystems" and Master's in "Applied Basic Environment," and the existence of a research team called "Legislative Policy in the Field of Environment" aimed at revealing and evaluating legislative rules in environmental protection. The scientific proposal also discusses topics of hazardous waste (industrial and medical) and their legal and economic impacts, confirming that the university's institutional and research framework covers the legal aspects of hazardous waste treatment, in line with Algerian law (Law 01-19 and its amendments).
