University Programs to Combat Poverty

01-03-01

Does your university, as an institution, have targets for admitting students who fall within the lowest 20% of household income groups (or a more specific target) in the country?

Yes. The admission policy at Abbas Laghrou University – Khenchela is based on the principle of equality and equal opportunity, as enshrined in the Constitution and national legislation. Admission to higher education institutions is governed by the National Automated Placement System, which allocates university placements solely based on Baccalaureate examination results, without any consideration of a student's economic or social background.

National Automated Placement System

<https://www.orientation-esi.dz>

This system represents a model of fairness in educational opportunities, as all applicants are assessed solely on the basis of merit and academic achievement, ensuring transparency and equality in university access.

In parallel, the State embodies the principle of social justice through a strong and comprehensive social support system that enables all students, regardless of their financial circumstances, to pursue university studies under favorable conditions. This support includes monthly financial allowances, free university housing, as well as free meals and transportation for all students without exception. Such measures ensure students' ability to continue their higher education without financial obstacles.

Abbas Laghrou University – Khenchela does not apply any social or ethnic quota system in university admissions. However, national policies take into account regional balance by establishing new higher education institutions in remote and disadvantaged areas, with the aim of bringing higher education closer to citizens and promoting local development.

THE SDG 01

A notable example of this effort is the opening of the Faculty of Medicine branch at Abbas Laghrou University – Khenchela in 2024, which was established to expand access to specialized university education in the country's interior regions.

01-03-02

Does your university, as an institution, have targets for graduation/completion among students who fall within the lowest 20% of household income groups (or a more specific target) nationally? (Locally)

Yes. The general policy of Abbas Laghrou University – Khenchela is founded on the principle of equality and equal opportunity for all students, without any discrimination based on social or economic background. In alignment with the national higher education policy, the university works to ensure the success and continuity of all students through a comprehensive and free social support system, which includes financial assistance, housing, transportation, and catering services.

These mechanisms provide students from low-income families with equal opportunities to enroll, study, and graduate, thereby effectively realizing the principle of equity in access to and completion of higher education.

01-03-03

Does your university provide support (such as food, housing, transportation, or legal services) to students from low-income families to enable them to complete their university studies?

Yes. With the support of the Algerian State, Abbas Laghrour University – Khenchela places great emphasis on the social dimension of university life through a comprehensive and integrated support system targeting all students without exception.

This system aims to enable students to pursue their university education under favorable conditions while reducing the financial burden on their families.

Financial Assistance Platform (Financial Aid)

This support includes university catering services, which provide three complete meals (breakfast, lunch, and dinner) daily. These services are available to all students through five restaurants located within university residences, in addition to two central restaurants situated in El Hamma and at the Abdelhak Brarahi University Campus.

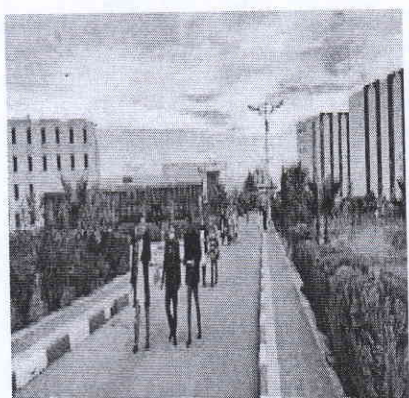

This system ensures that students benefit from balanced and nutritious daily meals, contributing to their well-being and academic performance.

The number of students benefiting from university housing is 4,000, the number of students receiving transportation assistance is 7,733, and the number of students receiving financial aid is 9,105.

04-03-01

Does your university, as an institution, have programs or initiatives to assist students who fall within the lowest 20% of household income groups (or a more specific target) in the country to successfully complete their studies?

Abbas Laghrour University – Khenchela is committed to promoting the principle of equal opportunity in higher education by adopting a range of programs and initiatives specifically designed to support all students without exception. All students benefit from financial assistance, and the university provides free supportive services, including university transportation, accommodation in student residences, meals in residences, and healthcare services across university facilities.

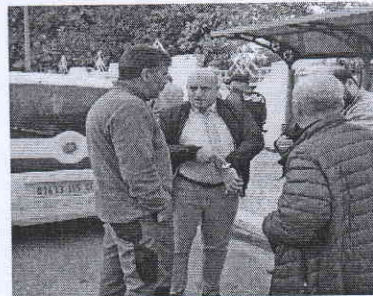

These measures help reduce the financial burden on students, including those from low-income families, thereby contributing to the fulfillment of the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals, particularly Goal 1: No Poverty and Goal 4: Quality Education.

Does your university, as an institution, have plans to support low-income students from low- or middle-income countries (e.g., by providing free education or scholarships)?

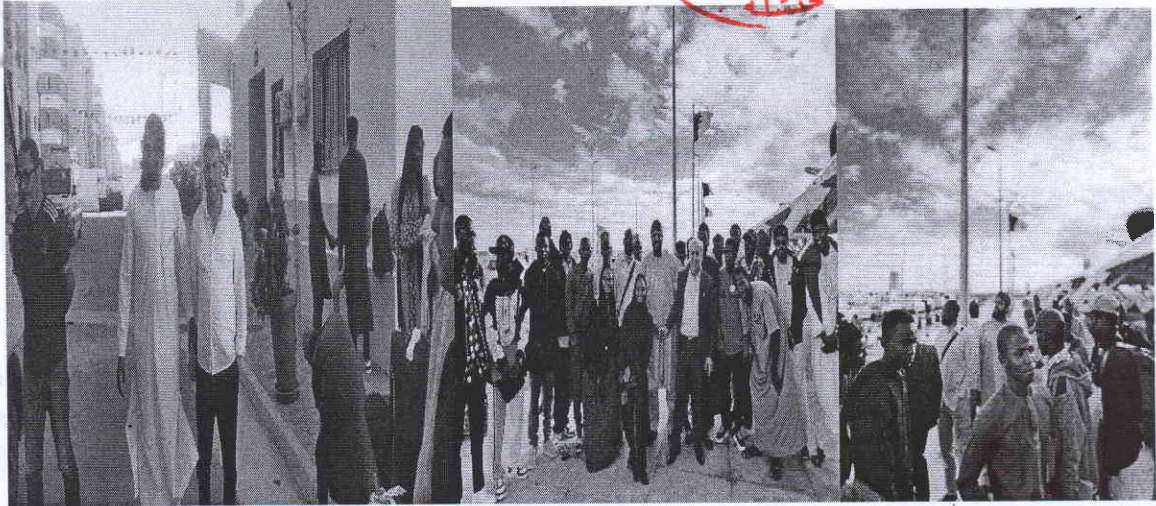

In line with its commitment to academic solidarity and international openness, and in coordination with the Ministry of Higher Education and Scientific Research, Abbas Laghrou University – Khenchela implements a support policy aimed at foreign students from low- and middle-income countries, particularly from Africa and the Arab world.

This policy is embodied through the Foreign Students Financial Aid Program, which annually provides a significant number of full scholarships under bilateral and multilateral cooperation agreements, as well as cultural exchange programs and South–South cooperation initiatives.

Currently, 10 students are pursuing their studies at Abbas Laghrou University – Khenchela: 8 from Mauritania and 2 from Mali.
